Stewarts invites you to its second training webinar for medical expert witnesses.

Due to current government guidelines, this training will be held online in a streamlined format.

Nick Knowles will introduce presentations from Dr Parashar Ramanuj MRCPsych, consultant psychiatrist at the Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital, and Martyn McLeish, barrister at Cloisters.

Please see further details below. We hope you can join us.

Decoding FND: it's all in your head – Dr Parashar Ramanuj MRCPsych

Functional Neurological Disorder (FND) is the second most common condition neurologists see and the most misunderstood. Over the centuries, this group of conditions has been put down to the wrath of the gods, wandering wombs or repressed emotional trauma. But in the last two decades the secrets of these conditions have started to be unlocked and are providing new insights into the way the mind interacts with the body. Or more accurately, how the body interacts with the mind. This is challenging our notion of what constitutes a neurological disorder, including cauda equina syndrome.

The fallible client: how clients overcome evidential gaps to prove their case – Martyn McLeish Martyn's presentation will cover evidential gaps, problems with medical causation, credibility issues, exaggeration, malingering and other issues.
